DO: Accountability with another believer can be extremely helpful keeping ourselves “in-check” in our Christian walk. The purpose of having someone else hold us accountable is not to judge us, but instead it is to “help us up,” and to “sharpen” us. Think about different people in your life that you know have your best interest in mind, and ask one of them if they would be willing to help keep you accountable in your walk with God. It can be a friend, parent, sibling, youth pastor/leader, or anyone else that you know loves God, and loves you. When choosing a partner, make sure it is someone you can trust since you will be sharing personal things with them.
